This is a really painful downvote. Star Realms itself is a really fantastic card game but the AI is ludicrously unfair to play against in campaign. Supposedly there is a normal and hard mode but in terms of the AI's play-style it never changes, just gets "luckier." I can be over 60+ in health with a strong board presence and in turn 5 it will chain 12+ cards and over 30 damage on the so-called normal mode when only on chapter 3. That is not fun and it happens with alarming regularity. I would say easily over 60% of the game is me losing before the game even gets started because of a (there it is again) "lucky" streak for the the 5th game in a row. Fix the AI and this will get a well deserved thumbs up from me.. The latest update destroyed the enjoyability of this game. This previously good computer port of a great card game went from elegant and addictive to unattractive and annoying. If you do download this game, be sure not to buy the unlock for the medium and hard levels. The advanced difficulty levels only allow the AI to cheat even more which really takes the fun out of playing. As of this writing, the screenshots are of the original version that I downloaded and not the updated version.. I was originally researching the card game to see if it would be something good for a casual board gaming group I'm in, and then discovered the computer and mobile version. It's certainly casual, and not very serious (some skill, but lots of luck also). I tend to prefer games that emphasize skill more, but this is just fine for me. I have to confess that while the game is certainly quite easy to understand once you've played a bit, I don't think that I'm particularly good at it. I haven't yet played online, so I can't comment on how well that works. But solo play against the AI works quite well. There's also a campaign mode, to play a series of scenarios (with pre-loaded decks).. THis is extremely Fun and Enjoyable game. I would recommend this to any family or anyone who loves card games or deck building games. This is thoroughly enjoyable game. I tototally enjoy this I even play against my partner and with friends only and against the computer. I'm always having fun, even when lossing.. Love this app and the new content. I did notice a bug where you can't click on your deck after a reshuffle.. Do I recommend this game? Absolutely. I've been playing Star Realms for a while now. I got it back when it was in The Humble Card Game Bundle and I got the physical deck with it. This game is an excellent deckbuilding strategy card game. It's complex, but very easy to pick up and understand. Many of my friends have gotten use out of the deck and it has been beaten and worn out. Unfortunately, the developers kind of shot themselves in the foot by labeling this as Free-to-Play. I'm guessing the reason they did it is for people (like me) who had previously paid for the game and already had an account with the developer. So we didn't have to spend more money to get the Steam version, and rather than generating Steam Keys, they got around it this way. I don't think they meant to mislead anyone. The F2P version of this IS really just a demo, however. But please, try out the demo, see if you like the style of play. If you do, spend the 5 bucks. It's well worth it.. I would really like to recommend this, because I love the game a lot, but dear god, it's so unpolished. I hope this downvote might get the dev's attention. First of all, when playing multiplayer, you can only see the next player's moves after they've played instead of real time. There is not even a time counter on multiplayer games, which is pretty dumb considering your only 2 options are a 48 hour turn game, or a 3 minute game. Another problem is that when playing a 3 minutes per turn game, after you take your turn, there is no "next game" option, as there is with 48 hour turn games, which begs the question, was this game even properly playtested? Lastly, the games you finish stay in your online game pool, and there's no way to delete them, which is understandably annoying as ***k. So if I would say buy this game, but devs, please. A few more touch ups which would be nice would be volume sliders instead of toggle, and maybe a variation in the music you play? Also, the ability to sync your steam friendslist would be dope. In any case, an actual friends list in the game should also be a given, as it's rather annoying to have to remember all of your friend's star realms names. Also, a chat option would be nice.
